Supervisor’s Report

Last month I discussed the role of supervisor in the government of Columbia County. I mentioned that one of the ad hoc working groups on which I serve is reviewing the structure of county government to determine whether the present Board of Supervisors model should be replaced by a county administrator or manager. Tuesday was the first meeting of this working group.

Currently the Board of Supervisors functions as both the executive and legislative arms of Columbia County. One supervisor is elected by the members to serve as chair, and in turn the chair appoints other supervisors to chair and serve on committees that oversee county operations and services.

The county's system of government was last reviewed fifteen years ago. In 2011, a "County Manager Initiative Subcommittee," following many months of investigation and research, issued a report noting that only nine of New York's 57 non-New York City counties used part-time town supervisors to manage their counties without a full-time professional manager, administrator, or elected executive. Noting that with a budget of $150 million, county government had grown more and more complex, the 2011 report recommended that Columbia County hire a county manager to "dramatically improve the day-to-day management" of county government. The subcommittee noted that the county manager would be a chief operating officer, reporting to the Board of Supervisors.

The report touted potential benefits of hiring a county manager, suggesting that it would speed up decision-making and implementation, which would reduce costs then caused by delays, and improve upon the limited oversight provided by the Board of Supervisors, and allow the board to concentrate on policy and long-term planning.

Objections to the proposal included the cost of funding the position, estimated in 2011 to be at least $150,000; concern that a county manager would usurp power and authority from the supervisors; and that the potential benefits of having an appointed county manager might be outweighed by the loss of control and oversight by the elected Board of Supervisors. Ultimately, the Board of Supervisors decided not to move forward with the proposal.

In the years that followed, the Board of Supervisors established the position of comptroller, expanded the Treasurer's office, provided for a fully-staffed HR department, and set up a central business office to improve purchasing efficiencies and compliance with procurement policies. Nonetheless, the proposal to create a county manager position has resurfaced, in no small measure because the county's 2026 budget has increased to $186 million.

Objections to the county manager proposal remain, including the additional expense of hiring a manager and staff. If the manager's projected salary in 2011 was $150,000, it is likely to now approach $175,000, and this does not even include manager staff salaries. Also, last year's failed petition to provide for an elected county executive demonstrated considerable interest in having the voters determine who should manage the county's affairs rather than someone who would be appointed by and report to the Board of Supervisors. It will be interesting to see what changes, if any, result from this review of Columbia County government.

Solar Update-April 2026

Here is an update on our effort to have ORES dismiss Hecate's application for a permit to site its utility-scale solar factory in Craryville or to grant us "party status" so that we can present evidence and testimony before a judge concerning important, unresolved issues.

The administrative law judge (ALJ) assigned to the Shepherd's Run matter has before her our Issues Statement and my Affirmation supporting our position that a hearing is needed. She also has papers from Sensible Solar for Rural New York (SSNY), Birch Hill Road Neighbors Association (Birch Hill), and Craryville Farms, LLC.

Last month I reported that in Hecate's Issues Statement, it challenged one of the conditions in the draft permit ORES had issued. ORES required Hecate to obtain from Copake a permit indicating that the developer complies with our town code provision concerning flood damage protection. Here's why this matters: portions of the proposed Shepherd's Run site are within the 100-year floodplain. The federal government long has had a flood insurance program. In 1987, Copake adopted its floodplain code to comply with the federal program, which both protects the floodplain area and also makes it possible for the entire town to get flood insurance.

Have you seen pictures of the flooding throughout much of the proposed site and adjacent areas that was caused by this year's snow melt and subsequent rains? It's as if a small lake and several ponds were created, seemingly overnight.

Hecate wants ORES to determine that state law preempts Copake's floodplain code, just as it preempts our solar law, Comprehensive Plan, and Farmland Protection Plan. Our response to that is that if our code is not in force, we could lose access to flood insurance because Copake would be unable to comply with requirements of the Federal Flood Insurance Program. Why is this issue so important to Hecate? Are they afraid they cannot comply with our code provisions?

Then there's the wetlands issue. Depending on how it plays out, this could have enormous consequences for Shepherd's Run, potentially requiring a complete redesign of the project or preventing it from being constructed at all on the proposed Craryville site. In April 2024, ORES issued to Hecate what is called a "Jurisdictional Letter." The letter identified wetlands in or adjacent to the project area that were subject to state regulations and noted that the determination was to be valid for five years. The regulations prohibit construction on wetlands of "unusual importance," and require buffers between such wetlands and construction activities, including drilling. On January 1, 2025 the State Department of Environmental Conservation amended its wetland regulations. Smaller wetlands now are included in the definition of "wetlands of unusual importance." Several of these lie within the project area.

It is the town's position that the DEC regulations now on the books must be complied with. This seems to be DEC's position as well. If our position is upheld by the ALJ, Hecate will need to go back to the drawing board and redesign its layout, avoiding all state-regulated wetlands, including the newly-designated smaller ones. It is possible that this could further limit the size of Shepherd's Run, and reduce its nameplate capacity.

Not surprisingly, Hecate disagrees. It asserts that it must be concerned only with the wetlands listed in the April 2024 jurisdictional determination letter, not the smaller wetlands that now come under the revised state regulations, because the April 2024 letter is "good" for five years.

Both flood protection and wetlands remain major points of contention. We strongly believe that Copake must be granted party status to adjudicate them. But keep in mind: ORES never has granted party status to a town targeted for a utility-scale solar factory.

On March 30, the ALJ issued a procedural ruling denying Hecate’s motion to file more papers augmenting the arguments in its Issues Statement. Hecate claimed an additional submission would be “in the interest of promoting a complete record.” The ALJ ruled that Hecate had no “meaningful justification” for its request, and that “(a)ny additional opportunity for Hecate to submit a reply is not in the best interest of the fair and efficient administration of this proceeding.” Any day now we expect the ALJ’s ruling on our request to dismiss Hecate’s siting application or, in the alternative, to grant Copake party status in the proceedings. Finally, two days ago, Republican gubernatorial candidate Bruce Blakeman held a press conference outside of Copake Town Hall to voice opposition to Shepherd’s Run.

Supervisor Wolf states that before considering Resolution number 10, which involves adopting Local Law No. 1 of 2026, Amending Section 232-10 of the Copake Zoning Code, Scenic Corridor Overlay Zone (SCOZ), the board needs to complete the State Environmental Quality Review (SEQR) process.
