

Julie Nichols Thompson

“Leave things (and people) better than you found them” is something I have tried to emulate during the thirty-six years we have lived in West Bountiful. I want to help preserve West Bountiful for future generations, not just the three generations of my family that currently reside here.

My husband, Scott, and I have invested heavily in this community over the decades. As owners of two local businesses, we gave hundreds of teens their first job and mentored them. We provided a nurturing space for adults returning to the workforce or going through transitional periods of life. We have sponsored school and community events, coached sports, and provide service in our church. I was PTA president in West Bountiful twice and substitute teach in Davis School District.

I volunteer on a small committee established to create the first hospice in the Utah prison system, and I serve as a vice-president on the Executive Board of the International Society Daughters of Utah Pioneers.

I believe that my skillset, open-mindedness and integrity give me the ability to listen to and represent all members of this rich and diverse community. I would be honored to earn your vote.
